Group video and voice calls are initiated via the Calls tab in the lower-left corner of WhatsApp. In the upper right corner you can select the call icon (phone with a plus sign), and in the latest version of WhatsApp you will see a new group call. Tap this option and select up to seven other participants, and then choose whether you want to initiate a video or voice call. While WhatsApp doesn't offer more participants available on services like Zoom, users and smaller groups are likely to be attracted to the promise of more reliable WhatsApp encryption. Just this week, WhatsApp also announced that new content transfer laws have reduced highly forwarded messages by 70%, no doubt reducing the spread of fake news and scams.
